5

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A knowledge management system according to the invention uses print cover sheets to connect users to knowledge relevant both to the user and the communities to which they belong by making use of the declaration of relevance implicit in the print process. The cover sheet becomes an input, output and surrogate document mechanism enabling access to both document repositories and associated knowledge management services, such as for example, document related services and a recommender service.